Can you find it?

Medical officials here ask Lajes residents to be familiar with the location of the emergency room at the hospital in Angra. After hours, the hospital is where members are treated for injury and illness if needed. Residents here are asked to familiarize themselves with the route and the location of the hospital.

The hospital is located on Canada do Barreiro in Angra.

Band performance

The contemporary Christian band, "Murtle" will give a free concert at the Lajes Field Chapel at 7 p.m., Tuesday. "Murtle" is from St. Catharines, Ontario, Canada and plays a style of music similar to bands such as U2, Third Day, Radiohead and Collective Soul. For more information, contact the Chapel at 2-4211.

New voucher rules

Use of the "split disbursement" choice on travel vouchers is now mandatory, according to the officials in the 65th Comptroller Flight.

The change was made recently per USAFE directive.

In addition, supervisors must now sign travel vouchers before they are turned in for payment.

For more information, call the customer service section at 2-3403.

And now -- the weather

Marine Lance Cpl. Joshua Stone of VMGR-253, a c-130 training squadron from Marine Corps Air Station Cherry Point, N.C., listens to a weather briefing given by Senior Airman Jimmy Ahern, a weather forecaster with the 65th Operations Support Squadron Wednesday. The corporal and his crew flew from Cherry Point to Lajes and back on a training mission. Eleven local national and U.S. people team up to deliver between 15 and 50 forecasts to aircrews every week. For more about how weather affects aircrews, visit "Weather clears skies for bomber pilots" on Air Force Link. (Photo by Tech. Sgt. Jason Tudor)

Morale leave has specific rules

by Tech. Sgt. Jason Tudor
Crossroads staff

Summer travelers from Lajes planning leave in the near future could get some help checking out the rules that govern environmental and morale leave.

EML allows active-duty military, DOD civilians, Red Cross workers and certain DOD school employees increased priority on space-available flights from Lajes.

The leave is governed by three directives, including a local instruction, U.S. Forces Azores Instruction 4630.2R.

Use of EML is broken down by those people in 15- and 24-month tours:

- People on 15-month duty can take two EML trips per assignment.

- People in a 24-month assignment are authorized two trips per year. The year starts when the sponsor arrives on station.

The EML entitlement must be used six months after arrival and six months before leaving Lajes, said Navy Ensign Mary Decker, director for manpower and personnel for the joint staff.

"A misconception that people seem to have is that without an approved EML waiver they can't leave the island.

That's not true," Decker said. "Spave available travel is available to all eligible personnel."

Decker added that EML waiver requests are submitted on a case-by-case basis. She offered three examples:

- Mission requirements that affect a traveler's ability to use EML in their normal window. For example, command inspections, one-deep positions, or work schedules. This applies to military people only.

- Court ordered. Custody cases, return of dependents to parent or legal guardian.

- Marriages. People who get married while stationed at Lajes may be required to do paperwork or other actions not available at Lajes

Certain travelers are not eligible for EML. They include:

- Travelers on a temporary duty assignment

- Dependents traveling under the student travel program

- Family members who elect early return to the U.S.

Using EML "bumps" a military traveler's space-availability category from category III to category II, according to instructions.

Decker emphasized that travelers attempting to use EML should review all applicable instructions before requesting the entitlement.

Comm offers certifications paid for by GI Bill

Crossroads Staff

The 65th Communications Squadron is offering several computer-based certification tests with costs that can be covered by the GI Bill.

Through a contractor, the network learning center here is offering several courses in the information technology field. These are industry standard certifications tests, and general tests to certify basic computer knowledge are also available, including CompTia's A+ exam, Microsoft applications, Adobe Photoshop certification and others, according to Staff Sgt. Truth Finck, who works in the network learning center.

Anyone who has a Lajes network account is eligible to take the course. The certification tests are offered by Thompson Prometric Certification Testing.

The exams cost approximately $50 to $200, according to Finck, and must be paid for by a credit card. If the certification is a necessity for an occupation and with commander approval, the test can be paid for with squadron IMPAC funds. The GI Bill will reimburse the cost of commercial certification test also.

For more information, visit <http://www.gibill.va.gov/Education/LCweb.htm>.

For more information about the test, study material or to schedule a test, call Staff Sgt. Truth Finck at 2-3642 or Staff Sgt. Tasha Robinson at 2-2425.

AFAF up $800,000

Airmen are giving more than $5.9 million to this year's Air Force Assistance Fund campaign — $800,000 more than last year, according to Air Force Personnel Center officials here. This year's donations exceeded the $4.8 million goal by 22 percent, said John Lowrance, the fund coordinator.

About 70 percent of donations are designated for the Air Force Aid Society, the largest of the four charities.

The fund raises money for four Air Force-related charities that benefit active-duty, Reserve, Guard and retired Air Force people, as well as surviving spouses and families.

In 2002, AFAS officials helped 34,000 people with $24.1 million of assistance, officials said.

During the campaign, airmen can contribute to one or more charities through cash, check or payroll deduction. The charities include the Air Force Aid Society, the Air Force Enlisted Foundation, the Air Force Village Indigent Widow's Fund and the Gen. and Mrs. Curtis E. LeMay Foundation.

Airmen in world triathlon

The Air Force team finished exactly one hour behind the winning Army team at the 2003 Armed Forces Triathlon held at Point Mugu, Naval Base Ventura County, Calif., June 16 to 22.

It ranked behind both the Army and Navy teams with a total time of 25 hours, 49 minutes, 4 seconds. The Marine Corps did not have enough competitors to qualify for a team score.

First Lt. Matthew Nuffort was the first airman to finish, placing third overall in the men's division.

Top Air Force racers in the women's division were Capts. Camilla Stock and Erika Foster who finished overall fourth and fifth, respectively, with times of 2:10:14 and 2:15:36.

The 125 triathletes competed in a 1500-meter (about one mile) swim in the ocean, a 40K (about 25 miles) bike race and a flat 10K (6.2 miles) run.

The top six finishers in each division will represent the U.S. Armed Forces at the 2003 Conseil International du Sport Militaire World Military Triathlon Championship in Drotten, Holland, July 28 to Aug. 4.

Hand scanner access

Air Force officials kicked off a 90-day test period June 23 for the first large-scale use of hand-scan technology that could allow thousands of people to enter Scott AFB, Ill., with just a wave of their hand.

People wanting to access the base from the base's newest gate now use a hand-

Home plate

Staff Sgt. Tony Bonanno, 65th Services Squadrons, spoons up a plate of turkey and noodles for a dining facility customer Wednesday. The facility staff serves more than 3,500 meals each week and spends about $21,000 buying food, according to Staff Sgt. Kevin Gamblin, 65th SVS. More than 30 Portuguese and American workers, including Bonanno, help serve customers each day. geometry reader that unlocks the gate.

The hand scanner, commonly called a hand key, takes geometric readings of a person's hand — its size, length, thickness and surface area. It does not record handprints or fingerprints, but instead creates a three-dimensional model that is coded mathematically and stored it in the computer's memory. Each time the hand is placed on the machine, the information is automatically updated.

For instance, if a person gains or loses a large amount of weight or if the hand becomes scarred or disfigured, the geometry of the hand is updated. Each person punches in the last six digits of his or her Social Security number before placing the right hand in the machine, and this is, in part, how the machine is able to update the information.

It only takes about 30 seconds to load the information into the hand reader.

NCOA Graduates

Lajes Field saw two people graduate July 2 from the Kisling NCO Academy in Germany. Tech. Sgt. Richard D. King, 65th Communications Squadron and Tech. Sgt. Pamela A. Swogger, both graduated from the school at Kapaun Air Station, Germany.

Top Airman

The Air Force News Agency, with 16 broadcasting detachments and more than 500 people around the world, named Airman 1st Class Michael Fusaro its Junior Enlisted Member of the Quarter Wednesday.

Fusaro is a broadcaster at Det. 6, Air Force News Agency, here.

Form 1206 changes

U.S. Air Forces in Europe is no longer using the FormFlow version of the Air Force Form 1206 (V-3) for special trophies and awards listed in Air Force Instruction 36-2805. The command is now using the IMT 1206 V1. By Aug. 1, the FormFlow version of the 1206 will be removed from the Air Force publications forms web site.

Also, all write-ups for the annual awards listed in Air Force Instruction 36-2805, Special Trophies and Awards, will be limited to one page using the front side only of the AF Form 1206-IMT (V-1), according to USAFE personnel officials.

Staff cars

Military members walking around Lajes must salute staff cars. The cars are identifiable by the front license plate bearing the rank of the officer driving the car.

Don't look at progress with Western eyes

by Spc. Jim Wagner
109th Mobile Public Affairs

BAGRAM AIR BASE, Afghanistan — A couple hundred yards outside the perimeter here, loudspeakers blasting Afghan music permeate the night air. Faintly, the sounds of laughter and shouting come from the compound housing the local Afghan militia force there.

For the past three hours I've been stretched out on my cot, tossing and turning and trying to sleep despite the noise. It's now 1 a.m., and my first thought is, "Man, in the States they'd be getting a visit from the police for partying like this."

Then, upon reflection, playing loud music — any music for that matter — would have resulted in a lot more than a $100 fine two years ago in Afghanistan under the Taliban regime. In fact, a ticket would be a blessing in a country that only two years ago was ruled with an iron fist.

Lying there, I considered how my "Western" eyes looked at everything going on in the country right now, especially the progress of coalition forces to bring peace and stability to a region that in many ways came to a stop decades ago.

It's easy to look around and say Afghanistan today is the same as it was 100 or even 500 years ago: a living, breathing time capsule in the middle of a world of technological and social advances.

"... playing loud music — any music for that matter — would have resulted in a lot more than a $100 fine two years ago in Afghanistan under the Taliban regime."

Most Afghan cities don't have decent plumbing, electricity or adequate housing.

Most women still walk about town in full abaya and won't speak or look at anyone but their husbands or immediate families and wouldn't even think twice about baring their faces or any part of their body, despite the lifting of that ban by the central government.

Despite having their own standing army for the first time since the 1960s, in many remote areas regional commanders still rule over their tribes or regions.

Progress doesn't seem to have come to the country, despite the time and effort coalition forces have put into stabilizing the region so far. But that measure of progress is seen through the eyes of a Westerner and doesn't necessarily apply here.

Exactly 100 years ago, the Wright brothers conducted their first airplane flight. It would be another 17 years before the first commercial radio went live, 24 years before the first television and 36 years before the first digital computer.

I can remember like it was yesterday when I first saw cable TV and its whopping 36 channels; my parents remember when they saw the first color TV broadcast; my grandparents remember the first TV; my great-grandparents remember a time before both TV and radio.

More than one-third of the past 100 years in Afghanistan has been spent in constant warfare. When it wasn't civil war, it was the Russian invasion and occupation, or the Taliban rule that drove off or murdered most of the intellectual elite in the country. It's no wonder they are behind the curve when their progress is measured against Western standards of today.

Progress is taking shape in Afghanistan — incrementally, but it's coming. According to many experts, true progress will take at least a couple of generations, or about the generational difference between my grandparents' 'talking picture box' in the living room and my MTV.

Outside, the Afghan militia force compound has grown quiet and the music has stopped. It's reassuring to know I and all the soldiers, airmen, Marines and sailors here have played a part in making sure progress hasn't also stopped.

A view of the crater on Monte Brazil. Monte Brazil near Angra offers visitors great views, picnic areas and historical significance, all in one stop. (Photo by Tech. Sgt. Jason Tudor)

Volcanic eruption results in fantastic tourist spot

Mount Brazil, standing next to the city of Angra, is actually the result of an old volcanic eruption that originated the mount with its shape. This elevation, although small, is a very pleasant area offering visitors some interesting vistas and a relaxing leisure spot.

One of the many attractions of Mount Brazil is the big stone wall that is part of the São João Batista fortress. This wall is more than three miles long and partially surrounds the base of Mount Brazil, separating it from the rest of the island. The fortress was built by order of Phillip II of Spain when he took the Portuguese throne in 1580 and is one of the largest former Spanish bulwarks in the whole world.

The fortress' construction began in the beginning of the 17th century and concluded in 1640 when the people of Terceira rebelled against the Spanish occupation of the island.

A number of famous and prominent Portuguese people were imprisoned in the fortress, including King Alphonso VI, the father of the former President of the Republic, Mario Soares and the chief of an important tribe from the former Portuguese African territory of Mozambique, Gungunhama. The Portuguese Army's Regiment of Garrison No.1 currently occupies the fortress.

Another site worth visiting is a monument on top of Mount Brazil. The monument is actually a replica of the stone monument the Portuguese explorers placed in the different territories they discovered around the world. Engraved with the dates 1432 and 1932 on each side, it was erected to commemorate the 500th anniversary of the discovery of the Azores by Portuguese navigators. The monument is located on a place called "Pico das Cruzinhas" (Little Crosses Pike). This is where the Spanish installed the gibbets where some of the island's leaders were hanged during the Spanish occupation as retaliation for the resistance offered by the island's population against the Spanish presence. This site is a must-visit place, not only for its historical significance, but also for the stunning panoramic view of Angra and surrounding villages.

Not far from the monument visitors can also find a picnic area and a small zoo. The picnic area is a very enjoyable recreational place, especially during the summer months. It offers some barbecue grills with stone tables and benches and has plenty of trees and shrubs that provide a pleasant shade to picnickers. The zoo can be found next to the picnic area and features small deer, goats, sheep and exotic birds.

The center of Mount Brazil is actually a huge crater of an extinct volcano that is used as a firing range by the Portuguese Army stationed at the fortress and is the only area off limits to visitors.

Mount Brazil can be visited every-day between 9 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. during the summer months. Admission is free.

200,000 Par Air Force recognition progr a

by Master Sgt. Scott Elliott
Air Force Print News

WASHINGTON -- Your Guardians of Freedom, the Air Force's grass-roots outreach information and recognition program, has touched the lives of more than 200,000 parents of airmen, a Pentagon official has announced.

The program began in 2002 as a way for Air Force leaders to personally recognize the employers of reservists and guardsmen who were called to active duty to support operations Noble Eagle and Enduring Freedom. Employers who were nominated by their airmen employees received lapel pins emblazoned with the Air Force logo and the letter "E," and a personal letter signed by the Air Force's senior leaders.

The recognition program expanded in May to include parents. Nominated parents received a letter and lapel pin with the letter "P." All active-duty, Air National Guard and Reserve airmen may participate in the program, officials said.

About 110,000 of the nearly 590,000 uniformed airmen have nominated their parents for recognition, according to Brig. Gen. Ed Tonini, program director.

"That's a huge number,"

he said. "We've gotten an exceptional reaction to the program from the individual airmen and incredibly emotional responses from their parents when they've received their letters and pins."

The general said the program was so well received in its first few days that technical overload initially hampered the project.

"There was such an onslaught of people signing up, so we had some problems," he said. "We jammed the Web site to where it was virtually impossible to get in."

The program also endured a short-lived identity problem, where some airmen mistakenly thought the program was a fraud because of its dot-com Web address.

"We are 'non-standard' in many ways," Tonini said. "The standard Web sites people in the military are used to dealing with for official business is dot-mil, and we're dot-com. A lot of people thought this was a hoax, so we had to throw water on that fire quickly. This program has both the endorsement and full support of the secretary and chief of staff."

Tonini brought a network administrator, Senior Master

Parents United

Program has grass-roots reach

Sgt. Jack Gruber from the California ANG, to his team to work out the technical issues, and it has been smoother sailing ever since, he said. Gruber's responsibilities can be really daunting; the site was, for a time, one of the 300 busiest Web sites in the world.

"The site has had more than 29 million hits," Tonini said. "That's pretty staggering. We're working with new technology -- we're one of the first Air Force sites to use 'dot-net,' which is an Internet operating system that is very leading-edge."

A team of six people works the program, managing the technology and

"customer service" liaison between the airmen who request pins and the parents who receive them -- as well as the thousands of letters and pins sent to employers.

The program will soon inform family members, employers and community leaders during times of military deployment, Tonini said.

"The overall YGOF program will be tied to air and space expeditionary force deployment schedules," he said. "When people are scheduled to deploy, we will press very hard to make sure they have the communications and outreach support they need in order to be successful.

"In its broadest terms, it's an outreach program," Tonini said. "The message we give is, we consider each of the constituencies as our partners. We can't do our job without their support. They are full partners in the global war on terror."

The work is important because without support from the home front, deployed airmen face a domino effect of issues that may lead to those airmen separating from the service, Tonini said.

"The program is working and it does what we were looking for it to do," Tonini said. "We know there are parents out there who proudly wear the pin to church, the store or meetings, and every other time they have an opportunity to brag on their son or daughter. That represents a swelling support for the work of the Air Force all over the world."

Airmen may request up to two parent pins and letters to be sent to either their parents or people they view as parental figures, Tonini said. To participate in the program, visit www.yourguardiansoffreedom.com.

"Everyone has someone they want to recognize," he said. "The person who gets the pin will feel an amazing attachment to the work you do."
